Text visualization: towards interactive tools

- tools needed for looking inside texts
- for finding out more about texts and corpora
  - before choosing data for analysis
  - for interpreting the results
- > “exploratory corpus linguistics”
- Text Variation Explorer (TVE) developed by Harri Siirtola & the DAMMOC project
Text Variation Explorer (TVE)

- can vary the size and overlap of the text fragments to be analyzed (text view)
- provides line graphs of three common text measures
  - type-token ratio (TTR)
  - proportion of hapax legomena
  - average word length
- clusters text fragments according to a given set of words (Principal Component Analysis)
  - the PCA view displays each text fragment as a point, and shows the values of first two PCs for it
- allows three-way brushing:
  - Click a point on any of the views (text, line graph, PCA) and the other two will update to show the relevant part

Comparing and contrasting text corpora

- Text corpora multiply

- E.g. the Brown family of matching corpora
  - Structure: 15 text categories
  - Size: 1 million words, 500 text samples, à 2,000 words
  - Periods: 1961, 1991 (… 1930s, 1900s)

- How good a match?

- PCA: exploratory analysis using personal pronouns best for him to take the remainder of the term off, spend a lot of time in bed and, for the rest, do pretty much as he chose—provided, of course, he chose to do nothing too exciting or too debilitating. His some months later to move to Funk Furnaces. The job at Funk wasn't particularly better, but it got him away from being subordinate to John and assured him steady advancement, since Funk was owned to a large degree by various branches of Linda's family. Poor John's rise continued to be meteoric. When he was made a vice president only a year after the new sales job, a leading business magazine ran his photograph with a brief biography in a series on NATIONAL BUSINESS LEADERS OF THE FUTURE.

She called then to say she had a baby-sitter for that night. "Shirley appreciated the chance to make some money. Such a nice little thing—lives right in the building". "That's swell", I said sweetly. I could get along without that three dollars. In some ways it was worth being out the money—just knowing I was no longer obligated to Nadinel. It was past midnight and we were in change and broaden. _EMOTIONAL CHARACTERISTICS_ How a child feels about himself, about other people, and about the tasks confronting him in school may have as much influence on his success in school as his physical and intellectual characteristics. A considerable amount of evidence exists to show that an unhappy and insecure child is not likely to do well in school subjects. Emotional maturity is the result of many factors, the principal ones being the experiences of the first few years of the child's life. However, the teacher who understands the influence of emotions on behavior may be highly influential in helping pupils gain confidence, security, and satisfaction.

Concerning this responsibility of the teacher, suggestions for helping children gain better control of the emotions are presented in Chapter 11. The following generalizations about the emotional characteristics of elementary-school children may be helpful. _1._ Typically, Geno called B&B taxi, which took him to the Barrington campus along Route 9 in a rusty blue '84 Chevy. This road had been nothing but a slice of macadam through a cornfield when Geno arrived in Barrington seventeen years ago, but for him it was ruined now. Neon signs had arrived a decade ago, advertising a pizza shop and a bowling alley. Gas stations went up quickly.

My mom is standing in the rain talking to the guy whose pickup only a credit for gasoline and special motor fuel used on a

Window size

- three text measures: TTR, proportion of hapax legomena, average word length
  - describe vocabulary richness, style of text
  - at least the first two dependent on window size

- Biber uses 400-word samples for TTR

- hapax-based measures said to stabilize around 1,300 words (Keim & Oelke)

- experiment: change window size from 2,000 to 400 words

Gender differences in a historical sociolinguistic corpus?

- Women use more pronouns than men do in the Corpus of Early English Correspondence (CEEC; Säily, Nevalainen & Siirtola 2011)

- Does gender difference show in the PCA view?

Conclusion

- TVE is a simple but flexible tool
- Multiple measures are useful
- Window size matters
  - 400 words is small for TTR and hapaxes
- TVE will be freely available by the end of 2011 via the DAMMOC home page
